2. Brief description of the locality and situation

Weißenfels is a town with 40.000 habitants, located in the South of Saxony-Anhalt. The local problems are similar to the problems in other parts of rural Saxony-Anhalt. The population of Weißenfels and the surrounding area is decreasing while at the same time it is getting older. Especially young people leave the region due to better job prospects in the larger cities or the lack of leisure facilities and cultural offers. Still, Weißenfels is the biggest town in the area and functions as a regional center for surrounding municipalities.

The train station of Weißenfels is a potential project for the revitalization-program by the NASA GmbH. Due to a lack of financial resources and capacities by the local administration, no steps for a revitalization could be implemented yet. From December 2019, an interim solution with a kiosk / bistro operator in the reception building, which will also be responsible for the distribution of Abellio, will be realized. In the context of a potential revitalization, the train station could offer spaces for creative projects and leisure facilities especially for young people.
