#cooperationiscentral to cope with the "new normal"

The Coronavirus pandemic made borders in Europe visible again. One might think that as a result the need for transnational cooperation has decreased. But on the contrary: Times like these call for even more cooperation to build a stronger and more resilient Europe! Find out in this issue of our newsletter how our projects continue to work together and help central Europe to cope better with this pandemic and its socio-economic aftermath.

Funding: Stay tuned on Interreg CENTRAL EUROPE 2021-27

Over the past months we made great progress on shaping our future funding programme. Member states discussed thematic priorities and specific objectives that are deemed most relevant for transnational cooperation in central Europe. We are currently consulting their choices with you in an open and inclusive process and expect interesting inputs on possible actions and target groups. If you are interested in our future funding for cooperation, we recommend to regularly check our website and follow our social media.
